them.

THE THIRTEENTH COMMANDMENT

DAPHNE GETS THE BIG CHANCE THAT SHE HAS BEEN PRAYING FOR AND AT THE SAME TIME HAS FEARED.

Synopsis.-Clay Wimburn, a young New Yorker on a visit to Cleveland, meets pretty Daphne Kip, whose brother is in the same office with Clay in Wall street. After a whirlwind courtship they become engaged. Daphne goes to New York with her mother to buy her trousseau. Daphne's brother, Bayard, has just married and left for Europe with his bride, Lella. Daphne and her mother install themselves in Bayard's flat. Daphne meets Tom Duane, man-about-town, who seems greatly attracted to her. Daphne accidentally discovers that Clay is penniless, except for his salary. Baynard and his wife return to New York unexpectedly. The three women set out on a shopping excursion and the two younger women buy expensive gowns, having them charged to Bayard. Bayard is furious over the expense, seeing hard times ahead. Daphne, indignant, declares she will earn her own living and breaks her engagement with Clay. Through an introduction by Duane, Daphne induces Reben, a theatrical magnate, to give her a position in one of his companies. Her first rehearsal is a fiasco, but Reben, at Duane's request, gives her another chance.

CHAPTER XI-Continued.

"Well, I never!" he gasped. "And all this trip of your mother's and was convinced of the security of neipours and all the expenses gone for ther the convicts nor of the women othing?" was his first doleful thought. under these new anarchies. He was He remembered the second mortgage convinced of only one thing, and that he had placed on one of his properties was his helplessness. to get the money for the vitally important wedding festival. And now there At the apartment they caught Bayard was to be no wedding. The son-in-law just rushing for his office. He greeted who was to have assumed the burden of Duphne's bills was banished, but he knew that he would please Daphne was again her father's own Wesley better by hurrying on to his

He was glad to have her back, but for the purpose of entertainment. be could have wished that she had not in both directions. And now here was had not seen her before. He gathered dimself in New York and nothing to her to his breast, then held her out money and emotions.

At the critical moment Daphne men-Goned that the star whose understudy she was would earn fifty thousand dolfars that year in spite of the hard ley said: times. "Fifty thousand dollars" had a musical sound to Wesley's ears. If she's pretty set in her way. She's a Daphne could earn a tenth of that he good girl, though, mamma. And she would believe in miracles.

"Where were you planning to live, oney, while you're acting? With her have her way and if anything goes not facts in this toy game. If you her his breadwinner. Bayard, I suppose."

"Oh, no," said Daphne; "we've ru-"Who with, then?"

"Oh, by myself, I suppose." very well-a young girl like you."

"Why not?" she said. He turned pale. This was like being maked why babies were found under rabbage leaves. He was an old-fashbloed father, and he had never been while to rise to the new school of dishe children vitally interested. "Why, why," he stammered, "why, -seemuse nobody does it, honey. Nice girls don't live alone."

Daphne studied him with a tender musement. He was so innocent in his way, in spite of all he must know. She understood what he was thinking at. She was sophisticated in the manmer of the nice girl of her time and ahe liked to treat submerged themes with clean candor. She thought that prudery was a form of slavery.

"If you've just got to stay in New York and just got to work your mother could stay with you, I suppose." But what becomes of you and your

"Oh, I'll get along somehow. I don't dents, music students, college girls, women in shops and factories. It's coming more and more." "But you're not brought up to a trade."

"I wish I had been." "Well, that's a new complaint, anyyou lived alone you'd be misjudged, and men would keep throwing temptafion in your way."

"I had plenty of that when I was Hving at home. "Daphne!" He cried out in pain at the very thought. She went on, educating him with a vengeance: "Plenty of temptation and to the top floor. They were about to plenty of opportunity, daddy. It wasn't ring the bell of one of the big front your fault. You gave me all the protection that anybody could, daddy, checked them. But you can't protect people all the time. And it was when you trusted me most that you protected me most. cople are just beginning to realize that even in penitentiaries the higher the walls and the stricter the quards the door. As Leila said afterward: the more prisoners try to escape. They're sending convicts out to work England in her face, and her middle on roads now with no guards at all, name was Boston." and they do their work and some back. Don't you think women can b trusted as far as convicts?" "I suppose so," he sighed. But he

Daphne took him home in a taxicab. his father with whirlwind affection, office than by neglecting his business

Wesley took Lella by storm with his me away, since he paid the freight lavish and whole-hearted praise. He show for all the spilt milk of time, at arm's length to praise her and to patience that was of the sort one praise Bayard for bringing her into the family.

Mrs, Kip did not delay long the assault on Daphne's position. But Wes-

"We've had a long talk and I guess knows her own mind better than we wrong she can always come back could let yourself go and be foolish Miss Kemble's baby passed the crihome."

"Good Lord! you couldn't do that to boil over on: "Wesley Kip, are you going to set there and encourage that girl to ruin her life and her reputation without doing anything to protect her?"

"Oh, I guess she's not going to ruin anything. After all, the best way to protect folks is to trust 'em."

It was bald plagiarism, but Daphne sing vitally important topics with made no complaint. Wesley got into trouble at once, however, by making the suggestion that his wife remain as a companion for her child. Mrs. Kip took it as a sign that he wanted to get rid of her, and Daphne refused to take it at all.

> Wesley sat pondering in silence for a while; then he rose and, mumbling, "Be back in a little while," took his hat and went out.

> They wondered what mischief he was up to and what folly he would commit. He came back in half an hour with a smile of success. "I guess it's all right. I been thinking about all the different things been said. We don't want Daphne living by herself and she don't feel like she ought to trespass on Lella's home; so This broke her heart. She cried out: I got an idea and went down and saw "But you do matter, daddy; you mat- the janitor or superintendent or whatter terribly. Can't you understand, ever he is, and I asked him mightn't daddy, that I'm trying to relieve you it be there was somebody in this buildand make myself useful instead of a ing wanted to rent a room to a nice parasite? Thousands of women live girl. And he said there was a young sione professional women, art stu-couple felt the rent was a little high and had an extra room. So we went sermal-school women, besides the up and took a look at it. Right nice young woman, name of Chivvis or something like that; said she'd be glad to take my daughter in. I was thinking that if Daphne was up there she could see Bayard and Leila when she was lonesome or anything; and she'd way, but - well - of course you be handy where they could keep an wouldn't do anything wrong; but if eye on her if she got sick or anything." The three women looked at him in amazement. He had solved the riddle that baffled them all and had compromised the irreconcilables. "I'll bet the place is a sight and the woman a freak," said Mrs. Kip. "Let's go have a look at her." So all four went up in the elevator apartments like Bayard's but Wesley

"It's in the back."

The women exchanged glances and smiles behind the important shoulder blades of Wesley, the manager. He rang a bell and a young woman opened "She had the whole map of New tioned her about her work with all the happy.

ritanical way, and she looked exceed- tite for another's autobiography. She ingly clean and correct. Her very found it easy to tell him of her diffiand of the landlady.

Mrs. Chivvis led the way to the room once. Spotlessness is the first luxury in a rented room and Puritan beauty I'm tired out." has a grace all its own. The mahogany bed with its twisted posts, the ex- time on me," he said. "I'll see you to cellent linen and the honesty of everything won her completely.

She felt a sense of relief from the rather gaudy beauty of Lella's apart- ing grimly. He sprang to his feet with ment. She felt that Mrs. Chivvis, who a gasp of relief. He caught sight of showed such fine restraint in her fur- Duane and his joy died instantly. niture, would be equally discreet in minding her own affairs.

you'll take me."

said it with a New Englandish parsimony of enthusiasm, but her eyes were licity. kindly and Daphne decided that she thought nice things but lacked the courage to say them.

Daphne moved at once into the Chivvis apartment what belongings she had brought on from Cleveland, and her know." mother promised to dispatch the rest of them as soon as she reached home. Wesley could not be persuaded to stay over an unnecessary night. His

The mammoth Cowper firm had gone into bankruptcy owing him a handsome sum of money which he was not likely to recover. The failure also closed an important and profitable market for his calculating machines. It frightened his banks as well, and for the sake of a fight?" he had wrestled like another Jacob with an almost invisible cashier for money enough to meet his pay roll.

Yet he slipped a large bill into Daphne's hand when he bade her goodby at the station late in the afternoon, and he whispered to her she whenever she called on him.

Daphne reached the theater at seven clock and sat in the dark on a canvas rock, watching the stage hands Batterson arrived at length. He was tiger." in one of his humane moods. He asked Daphne if she had memorized her lines that he would give her another re-"After breakfast," he explained, was one o'clock p. m.

Next morning Daphne presented herself to Batterson and endured one of his rehearsals, with his assistant reading all the cues in a lifeless voice. Batterson was more discouraged than she was. He showed it for a time by a shows to a shy imbecile.

He was so restrained that Daphne a complete idiot, Mr. Batterson?"

woman. The trouble is that you are feel and you can't make anybody else feel."

And that, indeed, was Daphne's agony. She could not release her imagination or command her clear vision to see what was not there.

Night after night she reported at the theater and left it when the curtain rose. On one of these evenings Tom Duane met her outside the stage door. His apology was that he felt it his duty to look after his client.

He invited Daphne to ride home in his car, which was waiting at the curb. She declined with thanks. He urged that she take a little spin in the park. She declined without thanks. He sighed that it was a pity to lose the moonlight.

She Reached the Theater at Seven o'Clock and Sat in the Dark on a the all-important "How d' you do?" Canvas Rock Watching the Stage Their Repartee.

she walked home. He asked if he membered them. Then cues came more might "toddle along." She could hard- or less far apart and each evoked from ly refuse without crassly insulting him. her mind the appropriate answer. She

"You have wasted enough of your the elevator." As Daphne stepped Into the hallway she found Clay Wimburn there, wait- He seemed unable to find her.

When they arrived at her apartment up, but I have no reception room, and Wimburn loved Daphne and wanted her for his own. He had counted her the engagement ring nor paid for it. Mrs. Chivvis said she would. She Daphne was more pleased with Wimburn's misery than with Duane's fe-

"Won't you come up, Clay?" she asked.

He murmured, "Can we be alone for a little talk?" "I'm afraid not. The Chivvises, you "Will you take a little walk with me in the park?" "All right," she said as she led the way out into the street. "I'm pretty business was in a perilous condition. tired, though. I walked home from the theater." "With Duane!" Clay snarled. "You weren't too tired for that." Daphne thought of the motor ride and the supper she had declined. She said, "Are you dragging me out here

"There'll be no fight if you'll cut out that man Duane." "Am I to have no friends at all?"

"You can have all you want, provided-"

"Let me give you one little hint, Clay, for your own information. Every should have other re-enforcements time this Mr. Duane that you're so afraid of meets me he does his best to help me get my chance and he tells me only pleasant things. Every time you've come to see me lately you've gather and listening to their repartee. been either a sick cat or a roaring

She was planning to urge him to help her and make their meetings and she said she had. He told her rosler. But, lover-like, he took umbrage and pain and despair from her hearsal the next day after breakfast. advice, and since they were again at the vestibule he sighed, "Good night, Mrs. Duane," and flung out into the dark.

Daphne sighed, and the poor elevator man who saw so much of this sort of thing sighed with her and for her.

CHAPTER XII.

All this while Daphne was kept in readiness to take Miss Kemble's part broke out for him, "Do you think I am in case the illness of her child should result in death and in the further case "Far from it, my dear," said Batter- that she should be unable to finish her son. "You are a very intelligent young performances. With the theatrical season in such bad estate and most of too intelligent for the child's play of Reben's companies and theaters losing the stage. It's all a kind of big nurs- money heavily, Shella Kemble was his do. Anyways, it's her own mind. Let ery and you can't forget that facts are one certain dependence. He called and play doll house you might suc- sis and recovered. And then the his honeymoon enough already." His wife boiled over. It made her ceed. It's hard even when you know mother, worn out with the double feel as much at home as an old kettle how. But it's impossible as long as strain, caught a little chill that became on a stove to have her husband there you try to reason it out. It's like a blinding, choking cold. She went music and fiction and all the arts. through the Saturday matinee in a You've got to pretend or you can't whisper, but the night performance was beyond her.

And now at last Daphne's chance arrived. The Saturday night house was enormous in spite of the heat. There were enough people there to make fourteen hundred dollars-twenty-five hundred for the day.

Daphne, trudging to the theater for her usual stupid rebuff, walked into this crisis of her life.

Reben himself knocked at her dress ing room door where Miss Winsor was implored her to be calm, and he was so tremulous that he stuttered. He told her that if she made good he would let her play the part till Miss Kemble got well. He would pay her a handsome bonus. He would put her out at the head of a number two company next season. him off the stage. Reben obeyed him. that Reben had warned Duane of the her that there was no reason to fear him-in fact, had dared him-to watch the house. A Saturday night audience the test of her abilities. was always easy. It wanted its money's worth! It would help to get it. "I see," said Daphne. "I'm not nfraid of the audience." "Then what on earth are you afraid

"I'm afraid of me!" Batterson laughed scornfully. "Oh, you! You're going to score a knockout. You're going to make a big hit!" "Yes," said Daphne, "so you've always told me."

the young man skipped onto their job; the butler stalked; Eldon entered and made his exit. Mrs. Vining spread her skirts and sailed on, then Eldon went back. Finally Daphne's cue

She was startled a little as Batterson nudged her forward. She went to the door and opened it on her new career to make her public debut with She saw before her the drawing room

Hands Gather, and Listening to in a weird light. Beyond it was a fiercely radiant fog and beyond that an agglomeration of faces-the mass of tomato cans that she was not going to be afraid of.

And she was not afraid. She was curious to study them. She was eager She said she would get enough when to remember her lines. And she re-They loltered slowly up the quiet made never a slip, and yet she began reach of Seventh avenue. He ques- to realize that Mr. Eldon seemed un-

But she was young, in a placid, Pu- grateful flattery there is in an appe- At length she realized that the audience was strapgely quiet A sense of vaulty emptiness oppressed her. She smile was neat, exactly adjusted be- culties. He extracted encouragement went on with her lines. She undertween those of the gracious hostess or indirect compliment out of all of stood at last that she was getting no laughs. She was not provoking those punctuating roars that Shella Kemble that was for rent. It took Daphne at house she said, "Sorry I can't ask you brought forth. The audience had evidently had a hard week.

She decided that she must be playing too quietly; she quickened her tempo and threw more vivacity into her manner. She moved briskly about the scene, to Eldon's bewilderment.

She went through to the bitter end and spoke every line. But the audience was not with her for a moment. She used all her intellect to find the secret of its pleasure, but she could "I'll take it," she said; "that is, if his own, and still had neither refunded not surprise it. She tried harder and harder, acted with the intense devotion of a wrestling bout, but she could not score a point.

The company looked worried and fagged. The audience would not rise to anything-humor, pathos, thrill. When the play was over everyone seemed to avoid her.

She rubbed off her make-up and resumed her mufti. As she walked out on the darkened stage she saw Batter son. He tried to escape, but she checked him. "Tell me frankly, Mr. Batterson, what was the matter with my performance tonight."

Home and Get Married." "Go

"Come to the office Monday and we'll have a little talk."

"And I'll get my notice." "I didn't say that."

"What would you honestly advise me to do?"

"I understand that you don't have to act. Go home and get married." "I won't." "Then go home and don't get married.' "I won't go home." "There's one other place to go.

Good night." He walked off and she was left alone. She had the stage to herself. She stood in the big void and felt allen-forever allen. She shook her head. This place was not for her. She had been tried in the balance and found wanting. She wondered if there were anywhere a balance that she could bring down.

She dreaded the forlorn journey home to her dreary room. As she stepped out of the door someone moved forward with uplifted hat. It DON'T LET YOUR was Tom Duane. He looked very spick and span. His smile illumined the dull street and his hand clasped helping her with her make-up. He her from the depths like a rope let down from the sky.

Daphne would have been more content if Duane had been Clay Wimburn It was Clay's duty to be there at such a time, of all times,

Of course he did not know that this night was to be crucial for her, but he should have known. Mr. Duane Batterson came at last and ordered knew. It never occurred to Daphne Then Batterson talked to her. He told debut of his protegee and had invited

All she knew was that Duane was proffering homage and smiles and the prefaces of courtship. Daphne might have failed to gain the hearts of her audience, for all her toll, but here was a heart that was hers without effort.

Perhaps Duane was her career. He was at least an audience that she could sway. And she was miserably in need of some one that would pay her the tribute of submission. So now when he said, "Won't you

The curtain rose. Miss Winsor and let me take you home in my car?" she could hardly snub a heaven-sent mes-She said, "Thank you-you're very kind-but-" Oh, all right!" And she bounded in. When Duane said: "You must be hungry after all that hard work, Aren't you?" she said, "Yes, I guess 1 am—a little." When he said, "Where shall we eat?" she answered, "Anywhere."

"Claremont?" he suggested. This startled her, gave ber pause. Yet there was something piquant about the proposal.

Her theatrical career cut short, Daphne turns to Clay. They plan to get married and live in some fashion on Clay's meager salary. The next day a new blow falls. The future again looms dark and uncertain before the discouraged lovers.

(TO BE CONTINUED)

FOR YEARS

Mrs. Courtney Tells How She Was Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Oskaloosa, Iowa.—"For years I was simply in misery from a weakness and awful pains—and nothing seemed to do me any good. A friend advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I table Compound. did so and got re-lief right away. I can certainly re-commend this valuable medicine to other women who suffer, for it has work for me and I know it will help others if they will give it a fair trial."

—Mrs. Lizzie Courtney, 108 8th Ave.,

West, Oskaloosa, Iowa. Why will women drag along from day to day, year in and year out, suffering such misery as did Mrs. Courtney, when such letters as this are continually being published. Every woman who suffers published. Every woman who suffers from displacements, irregularities, inflammation, ulceration, backache, nervousness, or who is passing through the Change of Life should give this famous root and herb remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a trial. For special advice write Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass. The result of its long experience is at your service.

For Simple Stock and Poultry Troubles, such as constipation, indigestion, liver troubles, loss of hers with a saving strength. It lifted from Scours or Calf Cholera Many die and all are ruined if these aliments are neglected. Both can positively be prevented and overcome with

In Successful Use For Over 35 Years. merly called Black-Draught Stock & Poultry Medicin Get a can of Bee Dee from your Merchant.

CALVES DIE

Clear Your Skin With Cuticura

Inconsistent Action. "They gave him round after round of applause." "Well, that was only doing the square thing." Many Children Are Siekly.

Mother Gray's Sweet Powders for Children break up Colds in M hours, relieve Feverlahnens, Headache, Stomach Troubles, Teething Disorders, more and regulate the bowels and Destroy Worms. They are so pleasant to take children like them. Used by mothers for over 30 years.

All druggists, Sample FREE. Address, Mother Gray Co., Le Roy, N. Y.

"That woman is a perfect talking machine." "No; a perfect machine has an exhaust."

Hendaches, Billous Attacks, Indigestion, are cured by taking May Apple, Alos, Jalap made into Piessant Pellets (Dr. Pierce's), Adv.

If a man can't look you in the eye, better look his horse in the mouth. if he's trying to sell him to you.

A receipted bill is always considered a good certificate of honesty.